Wiha thus creates further added value for its users and can work specifically on customer satisfaction and loyalty to the company.

The challenge

As a modern company, Wiha Werkzeuge GmbH seeks direct communication with its customers. Via an after-sales portal, the company can offer its buyers a variety of benefits, such as a warranty extension for product registration.

Via a single sign-on, the customer should be able to access all areas of the customer portal with a single registration. This enables simple and direct communication with the various divisions of the company, be it product management, e-commerce or others.

Wiha also considered it important to have a flexible and expandable system that could be expanded in the future.

Our Wiha solution

Enables the group to maintain modern customer relations and effective after-sales management. The future-proof and expandable PHP framework Symfony was chosen as the basis for the customer portal, and the Rest API enables information to be exchanged between the company's various data silos.

The customer data is stored in a central database, so that Wiha can offer its customers a full service from all areas of the company after a single registration. The portal's responsive user interface enables it to be displayed on all common end devices, such as tablet, smartphone or desktop.
